A high-contrast, black and white photograph of a textured surface, possibly a book cover or a wall. The image is characterized by strong vertical lines and a dark, shadowed area on the right side, creating a dramatic, almost abstract composition. The texture appears rough and uneven, with light reflecting off the ridges and casting deep shadows in the crevices.

The image shows a close-up of a book cover with a distressed, wood-grain-like texture. A small, dark rectangular label is positioned in the upper right area, containing a single, large, stylized character that resembles a traditional East Asian symbol. The overall image is high-contrast and grainy, suggesting it might be a scan of a photograph or a low-quality print.

This image shows a blank page from a document. It contains several vertical black lines and speckles, which are likely scanning artifacts or dust. There is no legible text or other graphical content on the page.

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem or issue that needs to be addressed. This involves gathering information and understanding the context of the problem.
